Grade: 5-8

Genre: picture book biography

Curricular connections/themes: Canadian art history/ Group of Seven/ First Nations/nature/ National Gallery/ Canada

Emily Carr was one of the few woman painters of her generation. This picture book illustrated with comic strips focuses on four paintings representing four periods of her life. The first period named "Cedar House" shows her fascination and love with Canadian West Coast aboriginal culture. The second chapter is called "Autumn in France" and here she travels to France to learn to paint. In the third picture, "Silhouette" she is exhibited at the National Gallery where she meets the Group of Seven. And finally in "Beloved of the Sky" she feels free and at the height of her creativity.

Legendz 3 1591169941 10.99

Legendz 4 142150149X 10.99

Genre: Fantasy/Action

Grade level: 4+

Curricular connections/themes: mythical creatures, elements, bullies, habitats, competition

Legendz is a hobby/game where mythical creatures battle against each others. Each creature lives in a "talispod" and they possess the powers of one of the four elements. Ken Kazaki is a fifth-grader whose legend is Shiron, a wind dragon. Ken teaches his friends the importance of caring for your legend and providing the proper environment for it. The legendz seem to resemble their owners – e.g. the bully's legend is a troll and it uses earth elements (earthquakes, rock smashing).

Discussion questions: what type of creature would you like to raise? What type of environment would it thrive in and how would you make it strong? What do you think the strongest element is and why?

Parental advisory: The violence is between the toys except at the beginning when Hosuke the bully punches his brother and forces him to take away a classmate's legendz so he can win the tournament. Language: shut up, idiot (these words are spoken by the bully at the beginning of the story in volume 1)

WJHC teens are at it again in these four new episodes. Mrs. Bort sees the article in Teen Screem showing WJHC in a chaotic moment and decides to bring in a Faculty Advisor named Mr. Stranger, to provide the group with some adult guidance. Janey and her friends are horrified and must find a way to stop Mr. Stranger from destroying their image. When they finally get a second chance to prove themselves, WJHC wins the chance to compete in a contest called "The Fittest of the Fit" (a reality TV show). Janey accidentally finds herself on the runway of a big fashion show. Then everything seems to go wrong as the gang tries to get to the hottest concert of the year.
