Agenda

- Users with children
 - Student parents
- Supporting users with children at:
 - U of T Libraries
 - Ryerson University Library
 - York University Libraries

Children in academic libraries?!

Children have not been a group traditionally served by academic libraries, but users with children are a growing population and welcoming them is a matter of equity and inclusion.

The background is a light blue color with various organic, bubble-like shapes in orange, red, yellow, and teal. A large white circle is centered on the page, containing the text. In the top left corner, there is an orange circle with the number '1' inside it.

Student parents

Population and needs

Population of student parents

- Invisible population
- Population growing faster than non-parenting students
- 13% of Ontario's undergraduates (estimated)
- 11%-16% varying by province in Canada
- Nearly half of Canadian grad students identified family obligations as an obstacle

Student parent demographics

- Diverse
- No systematic survey
- Same characteristics as non-parenting students with additional challenges
- More likely to be older than traditional aged
- More likely to be married, female, and a part time student

Student parent challenges

- More likely to suffer stress and burnout
- Less likely to complete their degree
- Three main obstacles:
 - Financial pressures
 - Child care
 - Time management

"Institutional policies normalise the figure of the 'carefree' student and simultaneously marginalise student parents within higher education."

–Marie-Pierre Moreau
"Regulating the Student Body/les: University Policies and Student Parents,"
British Educational Research Journal

Institutional supports

- Universities centered around “traditional” students
- Supports include primarily nursing rooms and family services offices
- Some institutions have fee based campus daycare centres
- Children generally not welcomed on campus, though tolerated in certain situations

What are academic libraries doing?

- Updating usage policy and website language to welcome users with children
- Improving remote access
- Expanding hours to be more available
- Creating welcoming spaces
- Providing activity kits
- Programming

"UofT libraries should provide special study spaces for students with children. I have seen this in multiple university libraries and for a world-class university as UofT this should be a manageable task. "

- Graduate student, UTL LibQUAL Survey, 2016
